70 families to benefit from hamper program

BY SABEEN AHMAD
Didsbury Review

Approximately 70 Didsbury-area families were expected to receive Christmas hampers yesterday, thanks to the hard work of local volunteers and the generosity of the community.

With the hamper project beginning December 1, Linda Sirr, one of the founders of the 25-year Christmas Hamper project, was anticipating to be quite busy right up until the day of delivery.

"I start Friday and I won't see daylight until Monday...it takes a while," she said with a smile last week.

Sirr and a few other ladies began the project 25 years ago after Sirr became aware of families in need.

"I've always done food hampers...we had a bus ministry where we picked up kids for Sunday school and so I always knew the families that were in need...one year, two ladies from town thought that it should be community wide...and it just spiraled to be the whole town," she explained about the community run program.

Sirr said this year she put a little extra boost into the project by informing people of the project earlier. "I put some energy into it this year. I showcased it (at Showcase Didsbury) and got some names for volunteers."

Sirr said the project always starts at the beginning of December and deliveries are made on December 22.

"It just gives us a day if there have been any mistakes or extras - to fix it or make extras."

She added that it was hard to say whether or not last-minute names would come in but if it did happen they would make sure they had enough.

"If you're a regimental person...you can't do it. You got to be able to fly by the seat of your pants and you have to realize that it always comes - there's always enough...and if there isn't...well it's never been that way...there's never not been enough."

The community comes forward with names of people that could benefit from a Christmas hamper - a requirement is that they have a Didsbury phone number to qualify.

The hampers will consist of not only wrapped presents for the families but also non-perishable food and staple items.

"We try to help them...so that if they've over spent for Christmas they have something to fall back on in January...so it's not just a Christmas dinner," said Sirr.

There was a great turnout of donations of gifts by local residents, she added.

"The people that have bought gifts this year and taken angels from the tree and bought their gifts...they've done a good job and buying for the complete Christmas for the person rather than just one thing is a very nice gift."

Volunteers are caught up in a whirlwind of sorting, wrapping and delivering.

"The day before, I go through with a few people and we look at the ages and the families and try and pick gifts for that family. On Sunday night they are wrapped...and if it's not equal or for the wrong age they go through the gifts again."

The amount of work involved in the program has never deterred Sirr.

"I've believed in this project or I wouldn't be doing it for 25 years."

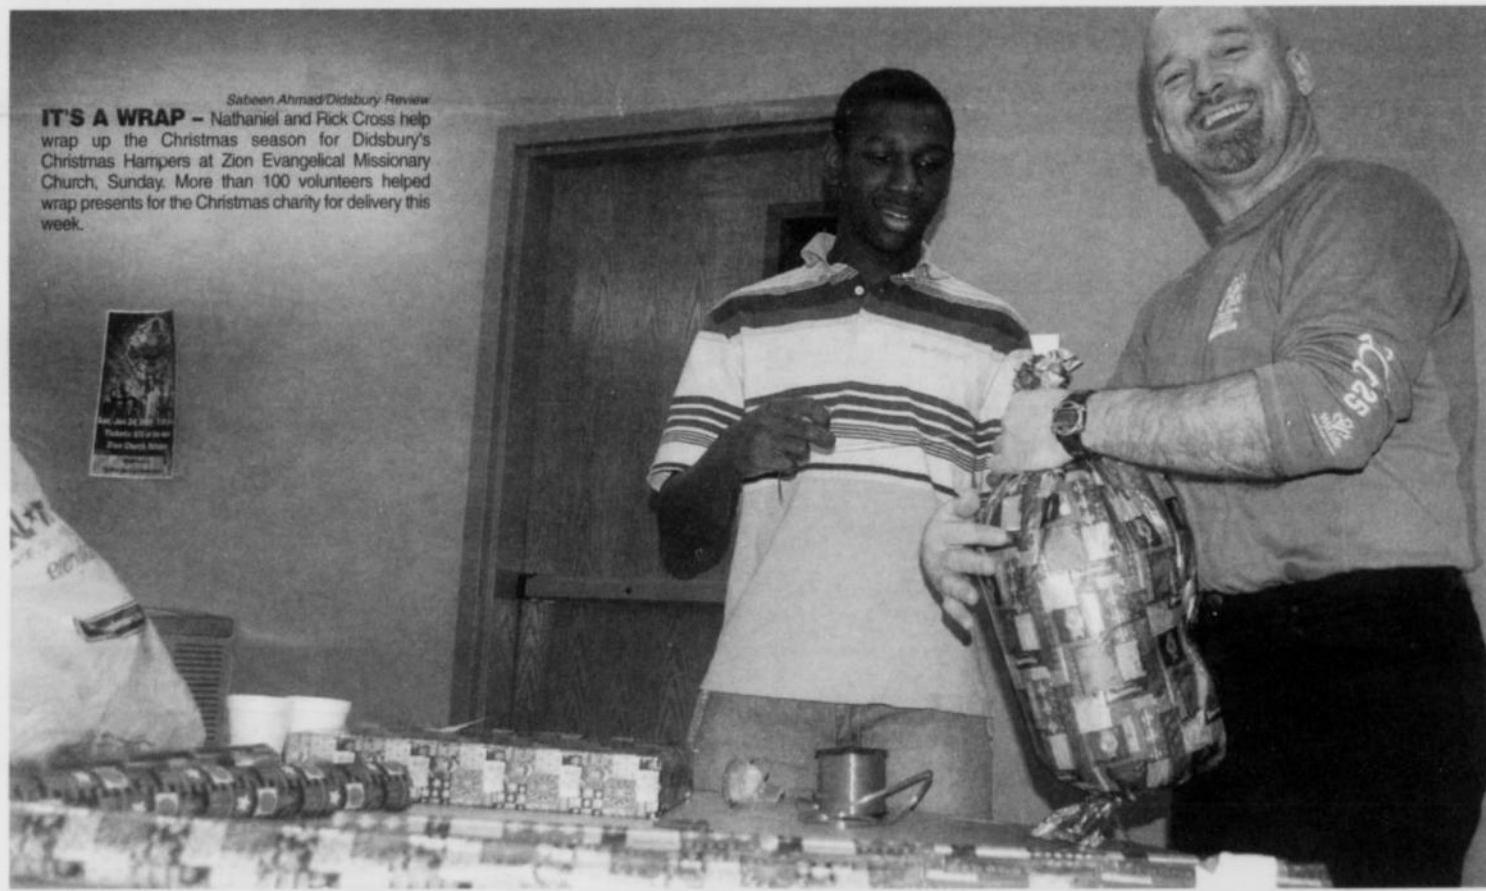

She acknowledged that projects like these don't always go off without a hitch and that sometimes mistakes can be made - a hamper might get missed or they might not have enough hampers prepared for an extra last-minute person. But in the end she said it all works out.

"You have to just watch it. It really is a God story."

Sirr believes that projects like these are important for a community.

"I feel that all of us need to care about our neighbours," she said, adding that a few days out of the year is not a large sacrifice to make to help out those in need.

"There's going to be glitches...there's always going to be glitches and I might have to work hard for all of those three days...but it's only three days."

Christmas dinner served up Didsbury-style by community, for community

BY SABEEN AHMAD
Didsbury Review

Although Christmas is often the time to gather with family and loved ones, some folks may not be able to. Ursula Krebs and Donnally McNeil are doing their part to ensure everyone is able to celebrate Christmas with someone.

The ladies will be hosting a Christmas dinner at the Elks Hall on Christmas Day. This dinner will be provided free of charge to anyone who may not be able to be with their loved ones this year.

"It's just a wonderful way to spend Christmas with so many people and it's not just for the needy, it's for everyone...especially if you're alone," says McNeil.

The dinner has been something that has been put on for a number of years. Linda Sirr took over the job that a family had started years ago, while she was working on food hampers.

"Last year Ursula and Donnally took over the job," Sirr says. While working on the hampers Sirr found it to be too much to run the dinner as well.

"It's just a wonderful way to spend Christmas with so many people and it's not just for the needy, it's for everyone...especially if you're alone."

DONNALLY MCNEIL

Being a single mom for many years, McNeil decided to go long haul truck driving after her children left home. "I was gone for quite a few Christmases...when I was home my children were elsewhere for Christmas," she explains.

Though McNeil had heard about the dinner in the past she was under the impression it was for the needy and never attended. Which is why she enforces that the dinner is for anybody and everybody.

Last year the ladies fed 55 people and sent dinners to anyone who was shut-in as well. Anything that was left over was donated to the night staff at the hospital.

With the season of giving in full swing these ladies are definitely doing their part. But the number of volunteers that help out should not go unnoticed. "It amazed me the number of people that are really stepping up to the plate just to donate," McNeil says. She added that there were a number of men who have volunteered to deliver the dinners this year to shut-ins as well as one gentleman who offered to peel the potatoes on Christmas Day.

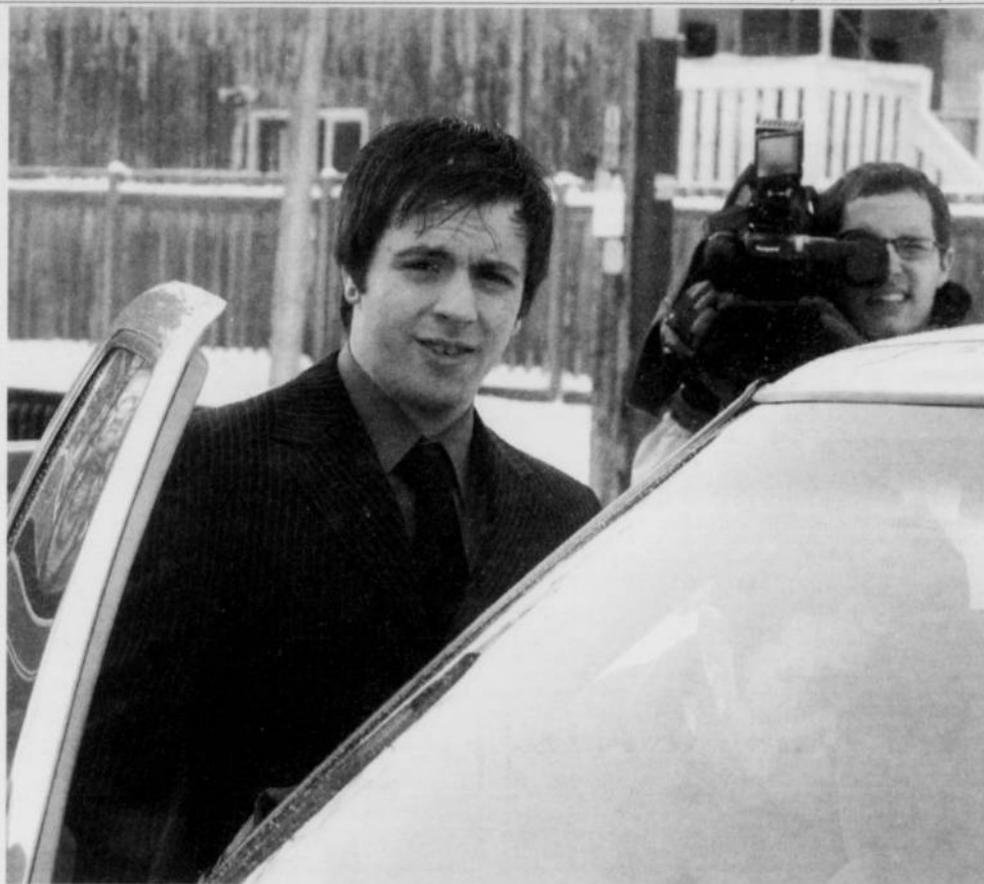

McNeil said they expected more people to attend this year simply because there was more awareness out about the dinner. She added, "[some] parents are on their own as children are grown and why cook a turkey for two?"

The dinner is not just restricted to residents of Didsbury. The ad for the dinner has been on the radio and McNeil says anybody who wants to attend is more than welcome and an RSVP is not necessary.

The dinner is expected to start at 1 p.m. and end at 4 p.m. During this time dinners will also be delivered to shut-ins. "I have already gotten a list of names from a care home and anybody that may know anybody who is shut-in can pass along their name to me."

There will also be a gift for those who attend. Everyone will be given a ticket as they enter the hall. There will be a display of gifts set up and as your number is called, you will be able to go up and choose a gift. There won't be a charge for this either.

It's clear that the spirit of giving is in the air in Didsbury and these ladies and the numerous volunteers who will be helping on Christmas Day prove that. "I'm more excited about Christmas doing this dinner than I have been in years...there's no need for people to be alone...especially on Christmas."

JAILED - Didsbury's Daniel Charles Haskett leaves Didsbury court Wednesday after being handed a 30-day jail sentence for animal cruelty and obstruction of justice. He will serve the sentence on weekends.

Animal cruelty case ends with jail

BY DAN SINGLETON
For the Review

Animal rights activist Tamara Chaney says she is very disappointed with a 30-day jail sentence handed down last week to a man who took part in what's been described as a shocking case of animal cruelty in Didsbury two years ago.

Daniel Charles Haskett, 21, was sentenced by Judge Ian Kirkpatrick in Didsbury provincial court on Dec. 17. Besides the jail sentence, Haskett was also ordered to complete 40 hours of community service and to adhere to a nighttime curfew.

"I think it is a very pathetic sentence," said Chaney, a Didsbury resident. "Thirty days on the weekends? What is that? It's pathetic. I would have loved to see the maximum sentence."

"I'm so disappointed, especially for Daisy Duke (the dog in the case). I don't understand how he (the judge) can consider duct-taping an animal's legs together, duct-taping her mouth shut, tying a plastic bag around her neck, smashing her skull in...and not call it intentional."

Haskett pleaded guilty in 2007 to a charge of animal cruelty and obstruction of justice. He received a concurrent sentence on both charges, and will serve his sentence at the Red Deer Remand Centre on weekends.

Haskett and a male young offender were charged after a Lab-collie cross named Daisy Duke was found severely injured on a Didsbury street in October 2006.

In an agreed statement of facts, Haskett admitted that he and a young offender decided to kill the dog, a Haskett family pet, after the young offender inadvertently ran it over with his car.

The pair admitted placing a plastic bag over the animal's head, and when it resisted, they duct-taped its mouth and legs.

After the young offender struck the animal with a shovel, the pair agreed to have the young offender drag the animal by a tow rope behind a car.

The animal's injuries included a fractured skull, pelvis, lumbar spine, severe abrasions, and profuse bleeding.

The animal was put down after being abandoned on a Didsbury street by bystanders.

The young offender pleaded guilty to related charges and was sentenced to probation and ordered to complete 240 hours of community service.

In sentencing Haskett last week, Judge Kirkpatrick said he took into account the fact that the animal was first accidentally injured before being harmed further by the accused.

"While the dog probably suffered unduly, it wasn't intentionally hurt in the first place," said Kirkpatrick. "This did not occur out of any malice or hatred of pets."

The judge did say the animal was "mistreated in a horrendous fashion."

Haskett declined to comment as he left court following his sentencing.

Outside court, defence lawyer Alan Pearce said he believes the sentence is fair.

"This was more or less a misguided attempt at euthanasia," said Pearce. "The dog was accidentally run over initially. The sentence is not what I asked for, I asked for a conditional sentence, but having said that, it is significantly less than what the Crown was seeking."

"I think he (Haskett) is happy it's over. I think he's happy to have this behind him. Everybody is glad it's over."

Crown prosecutor Haight said while he would have liked to have seen Haskett jailed for five months, "at very least a jail sentence was imposed and I'm satisfied with that."

"This was not an accident and indeed the Crown's position was that it would not be accurate to even characterize it as euthanasia," Haight. "These two individuals were simply trying not to get into trouble and in doing so inflicted horrific suffering to this animal."

The jail sentence should send a message that the courts take animal cruelty offences seriously, he said.

"It seems to me that judges do take these offences seriously," he said. "The judge felt that the circumstances were somewhat unique and so he gave the lesser jail sentence. It seems that the justice system is starting to take these cases seriously. The judge made it quite clear that only time in custody will count in terms of incarceration time."

"Certainly the public takes these kinds of offences very seriously," he added.

Haight said he was disappointed that the judge declined a Crown request that Haskett be prohibited from being around animals in the future.

"The Crown's position is that it would be inappropriate to subject any other animals to the sort of risk involved with this individual living with this animal and perhaps even undertaking some caregiving duties," he said.

A number of animal activists were in attendance during the Dec. 17 sentencing, several carrying banners and placards calling for harsher penalties for persons convicted of animal cruelty.

Tamara Chaney said the support she received for a petition she started following the dog's death – the petition that eventually garnered 110,000 signatures and was tabled in the House of Commons – is an indication of the public's desire for tougher animal cruelty laws.

"The support has been unbelievable, all across Canada. We want stiffer laws to protect animals. This case has been followed so closely. I haven't heard of another case being like this," said Chaney.

On Dec. 17 Chaney and others started up a second petition called the "Stop Animal Cruelty Petition." It calls for the federal government to toughen Canada's animal cruelty laws.

JED Oil Inc. sells assets

SABEEN AHMAD

Didsbury Review

Following an announcement earlier this month of filing a second default status report, JED Oil announced, on December 10, on their website that they have sold their oil and gas assets.

The Didsbury based company had announced in August that it had applied for creditor protection under the federal Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act (CCAA). The filing came after the company, which engages in the exploration, development and production of natural gas and crude oil in Canada and the United States, was unable to repay the $40 million in notes that became due in February of this year and was in danger of being placed in receivership.

The protection, which was granted a 90-day extension in September until December 15, was to allow the company, which had declared a net loss of $5.2 million US in the first half of 2008, an opportunity to find its financial footing.

According to their press release, the buyer of the Alberta assets is a private Alberta oil and gas company. The American assets will be purchased by a US limited partnership operated by a wholly owned subsidiary of the Alberta company.

The consideration for the assets is over $4 million. The proceeds will be used as part of JED's reorganization under the creditor protection terms of the CCAA. Closing of the sale is subject to court approval and is required to occur before the end of the year.

Commentary

The times they are a changing

IAN TAYLOR

With what's been happening lately in the world and in our country I'm reminded of the old Chinese curse - "May you live in interesting times." It looks as though education in this province is headed for some interesting times too.

The Minister of Education, Dave Hancock, has announced a new initiative entitled "Inspiring Education in Alberta". It will start in 2009 and is described as taking the form of a dialogue with Albertans. A steering committee has been announced (one of the members is our own superintendent, Jim Gibbons). The minister has already indicated some areas that need examining: special education, native and Metis education, technology as a learning tool, and the role of school boards.

The discussions will focus on five key values - opportunity, fairness, citizenship, choice and diversity... says the media release, and "It will result in a new vision for education..." To indicate his seriousness the Minister has promised to "open" the School Act in 2010 (something that would have to be done to change, for example, the role and function of school boards). Anyway, it does predict some significant changes.

One area that really fascinates me is how the world of computers and internet technology is changing the way students learn. We've already seen some impressive innovations in our own division. For example, the Bell eLearning Centre in Olds can hold video conferences with outlying schools like Delburne so that students there can participate in a lesson, both seeing what's going on, and being seen, and able to share in questions and answers. It means that students in our small high schools will be able to extend the range of courses they can take.

Communications technology has advanced so quickly and become so reasonably affordable that small portable and powerful devices like Blackberries and iPhones are now commonplace. The old model of computers in school was of big machines grouped together and wired in place in a "lab" where classes went perhaps a few times a week when it was their turn. Now we are moving to wireless connections where laptops or smaller devices can move with students as they go to different classes. Arrangements are also in the works for students to use their own machines at school in concert with the division's system.

It used to be that school was the place that housed the experts and the knowledge needed by students who wanted an education. You had to attend at certain times to receive that education. That concept is being increasingly undermined by the ease with which courses and subject matter can be accessed online at any time of the day or night by a generation of techno savvy students (now referred to as "digital natives").

With these changes some pundits have forecast the demise of school as we've known it, especially for older students but I think students will still continue to congregate together in a building on a daily basis to do the bulk of their formal learning.

The reasons are fairly obvious. First, some subjects and activities like drama, band, and most sports require group participation. Second is the need to access special facilities like gyms, science labs, industrial ed labs, home ec. labs and more recently, video conferencing rooms. Third is the natural inclination of most students to socialize.

For younger students especially there is also what's called the "custodial" function of school. A place where children can go to learn but also to be safe while most parents are out earning a living.

I predict that in 30 years' time things will outwardly look much the same as they do now, with students daily congregating at a place they call school. What will change most is the way they learn, especially with the help of technology, and that is another story.

Commentary

A symbol of hope in tumultuous times

About this time every year several of the local churches fill their fellowship halls with well over a hundred nativity scenes, and few duplications. Some crèches have a lot of personal history attached to them, are fragile and obviously well used. Others are new. All are unique yet there is a common element to all, they celebrate the birth of Jesus.

When I go to see them, I am always amazed at the diversity of these crèches, the care that is given to them, and the history behind the acquisition of some. Words like, 'This was my grandmother's or my great-grandmother's,' speak of a long and valued tradition of celebrating Advent and the coming of the Messiah. Many individuals have been collecting their crèches for a long time. But more than being unique collections these beautiful displays reveal a long chain of Christian belief that of course dates to the early church. From painted manger scenes in the catacombs of Rome to gold and jewelled manger scenes of a later church, to the first living crèche of St. Francis of Assisi held in a small cave in Italy in 1223, believers have remembered, waited and have come together as few or many to worship the Advent of our Lord.

It is interesting that the crèche should evolve from a Catholic tradition to become one embraced by an ecumenical community and that is probably as it should be. As a symbol of Christianity, it is too valuable to be reserved exclusively for one Christian tradition.

But for me, rather than just being a symbol of Christ, the babe in a Manger, and that would be good enough, the crèche also becomes a reminder of hope.

This year it seems that we are faced with some very difficult situations to deal with. The world economy teeters on the brink of disaster, the Canadian Parliament dabbles in chaos, hundreds of people face uncertainty in the new year because they have lost all or much of the nest egg they were hoping to have for retirement or have lost or will lose their jobs. Instability and uncertainty seems to be the present norm.

Yet with all of this present darkness looming in the background of people's lives, the crèche, for me becomes a symbol of hope. It reminds me that we have just celebrated the majesty of Christ the King Sunday to end the liturgical year and now begin a new liturgical cycle again with the first Sunday of Advent, during which time we remember the humble babe Jesus born in an obscure place to common yet not so common parents. It reminds me of the words of the Apostle Paul in 1st Corinthians 3:11, "For no one can lay any foundation other than the one already laid, which is Jesus Christ."

So each year people bring out their crèches and put them up, not as idols to be worshiped but as reminders of hope and Paul's words of Romans chapter 8.

Hope is not something you can think your way through. It is not something built on logic. Hope is not a feeling; feelings are deceiving - hope is not. False hope is deceiving and hopelessness is debilitating. Hopelessness, and its sister discouragement constitute one of the greatest threats to people throughout the world. These will be two of the most difficult elements of people's lives to deal with as we enter into the new year.

Hope is not someplace we can plot on a map or use GPS to find. Hope becomes a choice. Having hope does not mean that something will turn out well, it may not, for hope does not guarantee outcomes. Hope is a certainty that something though unseen, makes sense.

The crèche reminds me that I have made a choice. It becomes another reminder that I have made a choice to believe in God as opposed to not believing and that I have chosen to place my trust in Jesus, though arguments against believing can be equally as persuasive. Choosing to choose hope involves intent with reasoning and commitment to be in for the 'long haul' in someone whose birthday we celebrate on December 25.

In the context of our present world setting or community setting there is no place I would rather be situated than in a church surrounded by people who also share a common hope in what they also can not see. We may experience adversity, pain and economic adversity yet we remain committed to each other to walk together into the future no matter what it offers. The church despite its many faults still affords a place of stability in an unstable world.

May your life and/or church be filled with people of hope and people seeking hope. May hope become infectious and contagious for you and within your congregation and to those outside of it with whom you come in contact.

Blessings in this Advent season to those you love and those who love you from Berghthal Mennonite Church.

Bylaw Corner - Snow Removal

After a great November, like it or not, the snow and the cold are here. With the snow of course comes the shoveling. I need to remind everyone that the bylaw requires you to shovel the snow on the side walks adjacent to your homes within 24 hours. Those of you with corner lots are responsible for the sidewalks on either side of your lots. Also when shoveling it is important not to shovel the snow out onto the street, place the excess snow on your lawn or boulevard. If you are clearing an area of the street in front of your home you cannot pile the snow anywhere on the street. You must pile it off the street or the sidewalk.

Under the snow removal bylaw there are two offences:

1. Failing to remove snow from the sidewalk adjacent to your lot within 24 hours of the last snowfall.
2. Piling snow on the sidewalk or street.

Please dress warm and watch the ice. If you are a senior and are not able to shovel your own snow, please make arrangements to have it removed. Didsbury Seniors Support Services at 403-335-4391 may be able to assist you in finding a suitable solution.

Carla Victor/Didsbury Review

FOR AUNTY AMY - Josh Skull has his Aunty Amy checked off on his Christmas list with the purchase of this lovely silk plant at the Ross Ford White Elephant Sale. The annual sale is in its 16th year and this was the biggest one yet say school officials. Every year the money raised is donated to the Didsbury Christmas Helpers. This year's donation is expected to total more than $1,400.

Christmas 2008 message from the mayor

Snow is falling, Christmas music is playing and we are into the 12 days of Christmas countdown.

I wanted to take this opportunity to thank all the residents of Didsbury, my fellow councillors and the town staff for your patience over the past year as I have endeavoured to grow into the role of mayor.

I have appreciated your input and guidance as we work together to better our town.

2008 has been a busy and eventful year for Didsbury and 2009 promises even greater opportunities for our town to grow and prosper.

I would encourage everyone to take a moment and reflect on the past year, count your blessings, and take the time to remember those who may need our support to help them through hard times that they may be experiencing.

Compassion is a true human characteristic that can have the greatest of impact on others and costs us nothing to give. Call someone you haven't heard from for awhile and wish them a Merry Christmas. You may never know how much of a difference that could make to them in their world.

Let the true meaning of Christmas shine through in all you say and all you do.

On behalf of town council, my wife Kim and myself we wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Blessed New Year.
Joyous Noel

DIDSBUY REVIEW

Mudry - Doug

December 9, 1950 - December 2, 2007

There is a bridge of memories
From here to heaven above,
That keeps you very close to us
It's called the bridge of love.
As time goes by without you
And days turn to years,
They hold a million memories
And a thousand silent tears.
To us you were so special
What more is there to say.
Except to wish with all our hearts
That you were here today.

Forever in our hearts,

Missing you with love, Wanda, Rhonda & David, Lucas &
Ryanne, Stacey & Duane, George & Dennis, and Randi.

Bonny Gwendolyn Hartmann

of Didsbury passed away on Dec. 17, 2008, at the age of 51 years. Bonny was born Sept. 23, 1957 in Gainsborough, Sask. She was the second of five children.

From her arrival here on earth, to her departure back home, Bonny lived each and every day giving of herself. She loved her Lord and wanted desperately to share that love with each and every person she had the privilege of knowing. We her family are so very blessed to have the faith and strength that she instilled in each of us to help us deal with the huge void we now feel in our lives, and we thank God for the amazing gift we call daughter - sister - mom - granny - wife.

In compliance with Bonny's wishes there will be no funeral service. Memorial Tributes may be made to the Tom Baker Cancer Clinic or wherever you feel that there is someone in need. Arrangements entrusted with Mountain View Funeral Chapel, Didsbury. Phone 403-335-4773.

Holiday joy.

The Holidays are a time when families get even closer. And we know a thing or two about close families, because not only do we serve them, but we are one. Our family wishes your families the closest Holiday yet.
